Rootwork Conjure, also known as Hoodoo or Voodoo, is a spiritual practice that originated in West Africa and was brought to the Americas by enslaved Africans. It is a system of magick that combines natural elements, spirit

Roots and herbs are the foundation of Rootwork Conjure. Each plant possesses unique properties and energies that can be harnessed for various purposes. Some commonly used roots include calamus, mandrake, and ginseng, while popular herbs include rosemary, basil, and mugwort. By understanding the specific properties of each root and herb, Rootworkers can create customized formulas that target specific areas of life, such as love, money, protection, or healing.

Oils are another essential component of Rootwork Conjure. They are concentrated extracts from plants and flowers, and each oil carries its own unique properties and energies. Rootworkers often use oils to anoint candles, create powerful mixtures, or apply them directly to the body for healing or protection. Frankincense oil, for instance, is known for its spiritual purification properties, while lavender oil promotes relaxation and peace.
